Dear Dr. Hendrix:

The International Sustainability Council, Inc. (ISC) is a non-profit coalition of thought-leaders dedicated to advancing understanding of the relationships among ecological, social and economic systems for the mutual benefit of people and the environment. Our mission is to serve as a clearing house of research and information connected to sustainability, and to create partnerships between universities, businesses, governmental agencies and not-for-profit organizations that will serve as catalysts for moving toward a more sustainable society.

In that regard, we have been most enthusiastic about the efforts that have been underway regarding the “Colorado Carbon Project.” We have been most pleased to see a growing list of individuals and organizations that have become engaged in the Colorado Project. The ISC wholeheartedly supports the Colorado Project and the focus that is being placed on fully understanding the total carbon dynamics of golf courses. This means that the project will not only focus on the scientifically based relevance of the ability of turfgrass to sequester carbon, but to document the total carbon emissions connected with a managed golf course. The ultimate goal is to foster resource efficiency in golf course management and ultimately move golf courses toward carbon neutrality. The ISC believes that this approach will place the golf course industry in a wonderful, leadership position in regard to the carbon emission issues that we are now facing.

Please consider the ISC a supporter of the Colorado Project. Let us know of anything that we might offer to be of assistance and do keep us informed as to progress that is being made.

Sincerely yours,
